Investment involves risks, including the loss of principal. The price of units or shares of the Funds may go up as well as down. Past performance is not indicative of future results. The value of the Funds can be extremely volatile and could go down substantially within a short period of time. You should read the Fund's Placing Memorandum or Explanatory Memorandum and Product Key Facts Statement for details, including risk factors. Investors should not base investment decisions on this marketing material alone. Please note:

- The Fund seeks to take investment exposure to companies in or have significant business exposure to China. Investment in China-related companies and in Chinese markets may involve (i) heightened political, tax, economic, foreign exchange, liquidity and regulatory (including the QFII policy) risks, compared to more developed economies or markets; and (ii) concentration risk which may result in greater volatility than broad-based investments. The China A Share market is also unstable, subject to risks of stock suspension, government intervention and foreign investment restrictions.
- The Fund will obtain exposure to the A Share market, partly or fully by investing into access products and will be exposed to the counterparty risk of the issuer of the access products. The availability of access products is limited by applicable regulations in China, and as a result the cost of investment is subject to market supply and demand forces. Where the supply is low relative to the demand, acquiring access products may involve a higher cost or a premium.
- The Fund is subject to risks associated with the Stock Connect, such as change of relevant rules and regulations, quota limitations, suspension of the Stock Connect and information technology limitation. In the event that the Fund's ability to invest in A Shares through the Stock Connect on a timely basis is adversely affected, the Manager will rely on A Share access products investment.
- The Fund will invest in A Share ETFs and is subject to the fees and charges and the risk of tracking errors of the relevant A Share ETFs. If the Fund invests in synthetic ETFs, it will also subject to risks related to derivative instruments.
- There are risks and uncertainties associated with the current PRC tax laws, regulations and practices in respect of capital gains (which may have retrospective effect). Possible changes on the actual applicable tax rates imposed by the SAT and possible expiration of the current exemption of corporate income tax on capital gains may increase the Fund's tax liability and adversely affect the Fund's NAV.
- The Fund will hold investments denominated in currencies different to the base currency of the Fund, meaning the Fund will be at risk to adverse movements in the foreign currency rates.

▲ Investment Objective

The Fund seeks to provide investors with long term capital growth through exposure to China-related companies by investing in equities and equity related instruments.

▲ Manager's Comment

In October, the Hang Seng Index in Hong Kong fell by 3.91%, and the Hang Seng Tech Index dropped by 4.12%. Funds recorded a negative return of 4.97% for the month, underperforming the Hang Seng Index by approximately 1.0% and slightly lagging behind the MSCI China Index by about 0.7%.

In September, China's manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) rebounded to 50.2, entering the expansion zone for the first time since April, with the production index and new order index reaching 52.7 and 50.5, respectively. The non-manufacturing PMI rose by 0.7 percentage points month-on-month to 51.7. However, the prosperity of travel and service industries declined significantly as the peak season for summer travel came to an end. The growth of social financing continues to be driven by the issuance of government bonds, and it is expected to continue supporting the performance of social financing. Although the total amount of credit was lower than expected, the structure improved significantly. The financing demand of the household sector increased substantially year-on-year, but its sustainability still needs to be observed. It may still require a high increase in credit supply to boost corporate lending. In the third quarter, China's GDP grew by 4.9% year-on-year, surpassing the expected value of 4.5%. In September, industrial added value increased by 4.5%, higher than the expected value of 4.4%. The total retail sales of consumer goods grew by 5.5% year-on-year, exceeding the expected value of 4.9%. Economic data from August to September showed a moderate improvement trend. Although the pressure to achieve the annual economic growth target is not significant, the continuous recovery of the economy still requires further support from countercyclical policies.

China will issue an additional 1 trillion yuan of government bonds, and the Chief Executive of Hong Kong has released the annual policy address. On October 24th, the Sixth Session of the 14th National People's Congress Standing Committee passed a resolution approving the increase in government bonds by the State Council and the adjustment plan of the central budget for 2023. The central government will issue an additional 1 trillion yuan of government bonds in the fourth quarter of this year, and all the additional bonds will be allocated to local governments through transfer payments. The fiscal deficit ratio is expected to increase from 3% to about 3.8%. On October 25th, Hong Kong Chief Executive Carrie Lam announced in the annual policy address that the stamp duty rate for stock transactions would be reduced from the current 0.13% to 0.1%. She also announced a series of significant policies, including the "Capital Investment Entrant Scheme" for investors with investments of over HK$30 million in Hong Kong and a 50% reduction in stamp duty for new residential properties. The timing of this deficit adjustment exceeded expectations, especially after the economic data for the third quarter, where the achievement of the annual economic growth target seemed less challenging. It demonstrates a clear signal of stabilizing growth, and measures such as reserve requirement ratio cuts and interest rate reductions to release liquidity are expected to be implemented in the future.
