▲ Manager's Comment

MSCI China index dropped by 2.58% in the month of December. The CEWC has clarified the focus of next year's economic work, emphasizing high-quality development and the principle of establishing priorities and solving problems incrementally. Fiscal and monetary policies will continue to be strengthened, although the intensity is slightly lower than market expectations. Property and LGFV risks are still unfolding. The market was discouraged by a moderating M1 y-o-y, worse-than-expected retail sales, and a CPI that had yet again turned negative y-o-y. Many investors were also puzzled by the rationale and timing of the draft regulation regarding online gaming on Dec 22.

China's manufacturing PMI fell to 49.0 in December. The new order sub-index declined to 48.7 in December from 49.4 in November, and the output sub-index declined to 50.2 from 50.7 in November. The NBS commented that the decline in manufacturing PMI was linked to some raw materials industries entering the off-season period and also noted that decreasing overseas orders and insufficient domestic demand are the main challenges faced by some surveyed enterprises. The non-manufacturing PMI rose to 50.4 in December from 50.2 in November. The construction PMI increased to 56.9 in December from 55.0 in November, with the NBS mentioning that some enterprises increased the speed of infrastructure project construction ahead of the Chinese New Year holiday. The services PMI remained unchanged at 49.3 in December. Postal, telecommunication and satellite transmission were above 55 while the PMIs of water transport, airline and hotel services were below 46, partly due to adverse weather conditions.

Looking forward, we maintain our long-term positive view on China equity market. The CEWC proposed that proactive fiscal policies should be moderately intensified and aimed at improving quality and efficiency. In comparison to the July Politburo meeting, there has been a slight change in the tone of monetary policy, shifting from "precise and forceful" to "precise and effective." The total outstanding of the PBOC's Pledged Supplementary Lending (PSL) program increased by RMB350bn in December, suggesting that the media-reported PSL-backed urban village renovation and public housing construction are starting. Beijing approved 105 domestic games on Dec 25, just a few days after the online gaming regulation draft was published, to help stabilize confidence. From the market context in 2023, we see domestic policies remain the primary driving force behind market trends. We anticipate that more timely and forceful fiscal policies will emerge this year, and they will make positive impacts on market sentiment.

In terms of portfolio positioning, we will continue to seek a balance between value and growth. We continue to focus on the long-term policy beneficiaries (eg. software localization and advanced manufacturing), short-term policy beneficiaries (property and property-related sectors), and reopening-related opportunities (eg. consumer, Internet and financials). We will prudently pay attention to some thematic opportunities, including AI and SOE re-rating.
